Teacher Guide & Answer Key

Teach AI Your Taste — one worked example from taste file to exit answers, a key for every student item, coaching the "AI editor" role and the 2-minute talk, when it goes sideways, the copy-ready AI prompt, and full standards text.

WHY THIS LESSON

When an AI can draft almost anything on request, what still separates students is taste — knowing what's them and saying it precisely. The taste file makes that visible, and the editor loop (draft yourself → get specific notes → revise yourself) is W.6.5 in miniature with the classroom AI policy built in: AI is your editor, not your ghostwriter. One honest limit of the analogy, worth saying aloud: the feed remembers what you liked; most AI chats don't keep your taste file between sessions unless the tool saves notes about you. A good AI job runs human → AI → human: you draft, the AI gives the notes, you revise. Stands alone.

COACHING THE "AI EDITOR" ROLE

Three rules, and holding them IS the rigor: use only the taste file (a note that can't name a section gets cut), exactly 2 notes (editors prioritize), notes, not rewrites (the second the editor writes a sentence, they've become a ghostwriter). The 2-minute talk (Step 2, turn order printed on page 2) is where SL.6.1 lives: Speaker 1 (first name first in the alphabet) is the editor for minute one, then they switch. Every student reads two notes aloud and asks one question. Sample 3–4 pairs; listen for an answer that cites a section ("Section 3 says no textbook words"), not the editor's own taste ("I'd just make it funnier").

ONE WORKED EXAMPLE — JAYLEN, START TO FINISH

ITEM	JAYLEN'S WORK — no single right taste exists; score specificity and movement toward the file
Taste File (p.1)	S1: funny, blunt, quiet (+ "dry"). S2: short and punchy, lists. S3: "Never use words I'd have to look up." / "No exclamation points. I don't shout." S4 So me: "Saturday I made the world's saddest pancake and ate it anyway." Not me: "On Saturday I prepared a breakfast item that did not meet expectations." S5: "fast anime-style battles, quiet songs."
Step 1 draft	"Hello and welcome to my channel! I enjoy various hobbies such as gaming and cooking. I upload content on a regular basis. Please consider subscribing!"
Step 2 notes (editor: Priya)	Note 1 → Section 3 : "'I enjoy various hobbies' is textbook voice. Which hobby, said your way?" Note 2 → Section 3 : "Your file says no exclamation points — using two exclamation points is shouting. Say it like you'd text it."
The talk	(Jaylen is Speaker 1; this is minute two.) Priya reads both notes. Jaylen: "Which sentence is the textbook one?" Priya: "Sentence 2. Section 3 says no textbook voice — your pancake line is how you actually talk."
Step 3 revision	"Welcome to the channel where I lose at games and cook worse. Mostly fast fights, sometimes pancakes. New video every Friday. Sub or don't — the pancakes will still be sad."
Last Check	#1 "'I enjoy various hobbies such as gaming and cooking' → 'I lose at games and cook worse.'" #2 "Section 3 says no textbook voice; Section 1 says funny and blunt." #3 "'Make it better' doesn't say what's wrong or what better means for ME. The note that named Section 3 told me which sentence and why."

♥ ANSWER KEY — EVERY STUDENT ITEM

ITEM	WHAT COUNTS
Sections 1–2 (checks, own word)	Exactly 3 tone checks, at least 1 format check. The own word is the tell: "dry," "sarcastic," "soft" = specific; "good," "nice" = push for a real one. Any check pattern is valid — it's data, not a test.
Section 3 (pet peeves)	Two "never do this" lines an editor could obey: "no exclamation points," "don't shorten my sentences." Vague ("don't be mean") → "What would that look like on paper?"
Section 4 (So Me / Not Me)	Proficient: both versions say the same thing and a stranger could tell which is the student. Developing: Not Me is just a shorter So Me. Beginning: two different events.
Section 5	Feel-words, not titles: "fast battles, quiet songs" beats a list of show names. Home-language words welcome.
Step 1 draft	3–4 sentences the student would really post, in their own hand. Already sounds like the file? Fine — the notes target the gap that's left.
Step 2 notes (the DOK-3 item)	Each note names a section AND the mismatch: "Section 3 says no textbook voice — sentence 2 is textbook voice." Reject: no section number; a rewrite ("Say: 'Welcome to my chaotic channel!'"); the editor's own taste ("I'd make it funnier").
The 2-minute talk	Three parts, run once by each partner — Speaker 1's minute, then Speaker 2's: notes read aloud, ONE writer question, an answer that cites a section. That earns checklist row 4. A writer who argues back ("but I like it") skipped the question — "Ask which sentence, not whether."
Step 3 revision	Stars on every change; changes land where the notes pointed; the writer's voice, not the editor's. Word swaps with no voice change ("good" → "great") = developing. Unchanged = redo with the note read aloud.
Checklist rows 1–4	Self-report — verify against the page: row 1 vs the draft's handwriting, row 2 vs the section numbers on the notes, row 3 vs the stars, row 4 vs what you heard while circulating.
Last Check #1	Names one word or phrase and gives it both ways (old → new). "I made it funnier" without the words = redo.
Last Check #2	Names a section (number or content) and the match: "Section 1 says blunt; the new line is blunt." Citing the editor's opinion instead of the file = developing.
Last Check #3 (Objective 1)	Proficient: "make it better" names no sentence and no direction — better for whom? — while the real note named a section and a sentence. Any answer showing vague input → unusable feedback is proficient. "Because it's short" = developing.

WHEN IT GOES SIDEWAYS

The editor rewrites the draft → "You're the editor. Hand the pen back." Cross it out; the writer decides what replaces it. A note has no section number → "Which section? No section, no note." Can't find one? It's about THEIR taste — cut it.

Odd number of students → one trio: A edits B, B edits C, C edits A; run the three talks in a round, 30 seconds each — they finish while the pairs finish their second minute. A pair finishes early → the Extension (anti-taste-file).

With devices: the AI returns five notes or a rewrite → best case. "The prompt said two notes, no rewriting. Which two name a section? The rest is a ghostwriter talking."

With devices: a student wants to type their own → only the teacher's projected account runs today. "But the AI's version is better than mine" → "Maybe. Whose name goes on it? Take the note, not the sentence."

♥ WITH DEVICES — THE COPY-READY AI FEEDBACK PROMPT

Run once on YOUR projected account with one volunteer's taste file and draft (students never need an account). Fill the brackets from their worksheet:

"Here is my taste file: [the 5 sections]. Here is my draft: [the 3–4 sentences]. You are my editor, not my ghostwriter. Give exactly 2 specific notes on where the draft does not match my taste file, naming the section each note points at. Do not rewrite anything."

WRITES IT FOR YOU (REJECT)	EDITOR'S NOTE (ACCEPT)
"Make it funnier. Say: 'Welcome to my chaotic channel!'"	"Section 3 says no textbook voice — 'I enjoy various hobbies' is textbook voice. Which hobby, said your way?"

FULL STANDARDS TEXT

- CCSS ELA W.6.5 — With some guidance and support from peers and adults, develop and strengthen writing as needed by planning, revising, editing, rewriting, or trying a new approach. (Editing for conventions should demonstrate command of Language standards 1-3 up to and including grade 6 here.) Taught: Direct Instruction beat 3 (the editor loop) + Activity 2. Assessed: Step 3 starred revision (revising with peer support) + Last Check #1–2, scored with the key above.
- ISTE 1.1.c — Students use technology to seek feedback that informs and improves their practice and to demonstrate their learning in a variety of ways. Taught: what to hand an AI so its feedback is about your writing, and how to read two notes without taking the pen. Assessed: the two notes in The Editor's Chair and the starred revision on Revise & Last Check. On the projected path the class watches this performed with a real tool.
- CCSS ELA SL.6.1 — Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions (one-on-one, in groups, and teacher-led) with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly. Taught: the Step 2 protocol — two written notes, then the scripted 2-minute talk (Speaker 1's minute, then Speaker 2's: notes read aloud, one question, an answer from the taste file). Assessed: the talk itself as you sample pairs (the "2-minute talk" key row) + checklist row 4 + the two written notes.

SUPPORT & ELL — EDITOR FRAMES & TONE WORDS

Extra tone words: honest · goofy · calm · fierce · curious · sharp · dry · soft. Note frame: "Your taste file says _____ (section #), but _____ reads _____. Which part would you say your way?" Question frames for the talk: "Which sentence?" · "What would fit?" Revision frame: "I changed _____ to _____ because my taste file says _____. " Support: one pet peeve and one note are fine. ELL: the taste file may start in the student's strongest language; the tone-word table doubles as a vocabulary list.
