My Taste File

Name: _____ Class: _____ Date: _____

Your For-You Page didn't guess your taste (what you like and how you like it) — you taught the app, one like at a time. An AI doesn't know your taste unless you tell it, or it has saved notes about you. So write yours down in the five sections below. Your editor (the partner who gives you notes on your writing) may know ONLY what's on this page.

♥ SECTION 1 — THE VIBE

Check the 3 tone words (the mood your words give off) that sound most like you:

- | | |
|---|---|
| ☐ funny | ☐ chill (calm, relaxed) |
| ☐ loud and excited | ☐ dreamy (soft and floaty) |
| ☐ quiet | ☐ blunt (says it plain) |
| ☐ dramatic | ☐ poetic (pretty words) |
| ☐ bold (fearless) | ☐ mysterious (keeps secrets) |

One tone word of your own:

♥ SECTION 2 — HOW I LIKE IT

Check every format you actually enjoy reading:

- | |
|--|
| ☐ short and punchy (gets to the point fast) |
| ☐ story mode |
| ☐ lists |
| ☐ step-by-step |
| ☐ big idea first, details after |

♥ SECTION 3 — PET PEEVES (THINGS YOU HATE)

Finish it two ways. (Example: "Editor, never make me sound like a textbook.")

- Editor, never _____
- Editor, never _____

♥ SECTION 4 — SO ME / NOT ME

Write one sentence about your weekend that sounds exactly like you. Then say the same thing in a voice that is NOT you — a robot, a textbook, a fancy poet.

SO ME

NOT ME

♥ SECTION 5 — WHAT I'M INTO RIGHT NOW

Music, shows, games — the feel of what you like right now ("fast anime-style battles," "sad songs on repeat"):

The Editor's Chair

The loop: YOU draft → your editor gives notes → YOU revise. Two roles: the Writer is you, on your own sheet. The Editor is your partner playing the AI (or a real AI): reads your taste file, gives 2 notes, never rewrites.

♥ STEP 1 — DRAFT IT YOURSELF

Write 3–4 sentences: the About Me for a channel or profile page you would really make. Make it match your taste file. No AI, no partner.

♥ STEP 2 — THE EDITOR'S NOTES

Swap sheets with your partner — all pages. You are now the EDITOR for their draft. Read THEIR taste file (page 1). Read THEIR draft. Then write 2 notes on THEIR sheet, in the boxes below. Each note names a taste-file section (1–5) and says what doesn't match it. Notes, not rewrites — never write their sentence for them. With devices: your teacher types one taste file and draft into an AI on the big screen, and the class checks its 2 notes.

Note 1 — points at taste-file section # _____

Note 2 — points at taste-file section # _____

♥ THEN TALK — 2 MINUTES

Take turns. One of you talks first, then the other. Speaker 1 is the partner whose first name comes first in the alphabet. Speaker 1 is the editor for the first minute: read your two notes out loud. Writer: ask ONE question. Then switch — Speaker 2 runs the same minute. Then swap sheets back.

Your one question is "Which sentence?" or "What would fit?" Your answer uses only their taste file — never your own taste.

Revise & Last Check

Sheets swapped back? Good. From here on, this page is yours — your draft, your pen.

★ STEP 3 — REVISE IT YOURSELF

Rewrite your draft below. Rewrite only the sentences your notes point at, plus enough around them to make it read. Star (*) every change you made. Your editor does not write a single word for you.

EDITOR'S LOOP CHECKLIST — THE LOOP, DONE RIGHT

I wrote the first draft myself — no AI, no copying.

☐

Each note names a taste-file section and says what to change — not "make it better."

☐

I rewrote it myself and starred every change.

☐

We talked it through: my editor read both notes out loud, I asked one question, and they answered from my taste file.

☐

★ LAST CHECK

1. The one word or phrase you changed (old → new):

2. It fits my taste file because (name the section):

3. Why would the note "make it better" NOT have helped you?

Be honest with yourself: if the editor writes your sentence, your name is on words you never wrote — and you'd know it. Your draft, your pen, your taste.
